

Comedy Review

Event: Barnstormers – Monthly Comedy Night
Venue: Salisbury Arts Centre
Date: 26 November 2010
Reviewer: Rose Birch

This was a fun-capturing night for the audience to perceive, with the host Diane Spencer bringing Salisbury's own Arts Centre a laughter-filled evening. It was great to see such a well delivered show being so successful and bringing a large turn-out at a local event. It was a very attractive setting with a firm structure to it.

The Show enticed the audience constantly, with four acts cast well. Having intervals either side of performances of around fifteen minutes, kept a relaxed atmosphere to the whole thing and allowed the audience to regularly reflect on the past performance and take it all in.

With four acts in total consisting of firstly, a Welshman named Ellis James who seemed to have endless good material and was a delight to watch. Informing the audience of past experiences he'd had in his life. He kept the audience fixed as he role-played these events out, taking a rather more dramatised look on life. A pleasure to watch and had the enthusiasm to go far.

Followed by Denise Morgan a self-confessed looking depressant who was in no way disappointing and captured the darker side of comedy. She chose to play on her natural facial expression and how it has brought on regular misconception in everyday life; How people immediately presume she's miserable when in fact she isn't. A well executed approach and one of admirable entertainment.

Last but not least, George Egg presenting us with a completely prop-orientated act that was very innovative and timeless. Although he brought a more "slap-stick" approach to comedy, it was a very funny act and one I very much enjoyed.

The night finished as it started with the host Diane Spencer performing for us. Backing up her status as a confident and popular female comedian, brought the show to an end. All the comedians (with the host included) were highly amusing and presented successful acts for the audience's obvious enjoyment. I would have been happy to pay the fee to watch such a delight and would go again.
