Gig Review

Review: Hijack: Any Louder
Venue: Salisbury Art Centre
Date: 3rd February 2012
Reviewer: KM

The Hijack:Any Louder gig on the 3rd of February was a very fun night. We had two local bands – Things Behind the Sun and Tides. Both of these I have seen before yet they are still amazing me with their stunning talent. I especially liked Things Behind the Sun's new song – Fifth.

New to the stage was DSL Drummer. Although he was playing the drums to songs in a remix kind of style it was really good and fun to dance along to.

Then there was the headline band – I Divide. They were awesome! They had so much energy and were all over the place. Literally. On more than one occasion they jumped off of the Altar Stage and into the crowd which was crazy. I even got a hug during their set which was pretty cool.

Afterwards whilst the DJ, Thom Belk, was playing there was a chance to talk to I Divide and they were really nice guys. Having the DJ at the end was a good idea because it meant that you could get rid of any extra energy by dancing around. A lot of people had left by then, which was a shame but meant you could dance like a fool and it didn't matter. All in all, it was an epic night and I can't wait until the next one in April.
